

'WIKIWIKI' TO THE PARTY . . .

International Women's Club Goes Native in Grand Style

"Aloha . . . Wikiwiki . . . Mahalo . . . Okole Maluna . . . Pau!"

These are some of the phrases which were mumbled at the authentic, traditional Hawaiian 'Luau' prepared by Mrs. Midge Norbriga, her husband, and her father last week for the members of the International Women's Club and their friends.

Whole Roast Pig The main feature of a real island 'Luau' is a whole roast pig, cooked in an underground oven, lined with hot lava rocks and banana leaves.

Only Good With Fingers "Oh, it just tasted delicious," said Mrs. Trudy Clinkenbeard, president, of 908 Maple ave. "The pig? (cooked taro, pounded to a paste.) It might sound funny, but the only way it tasted good was when we ate it with our fingers."

Meetings The International Women's Club meets every other Thursday evening at the Compton Community Center, 123 1/2 N. Rose. The group is made up of foreign-born women, many of whom are war brides.
